Football Relations Between Pennsylvania and Penn State at Breaking Point---Quakers Seek Game With Tigers

TEAM IN FOOTBALL

It is admitted at Pennsy that Neill played three years on the Whitman eleven, but that in his first year that in-attution was rated as only a "erep" school and his playing that season was not to be counted.

not to be counted.

Whatever the merits of the argument.
Pennsylvania came back with statements about certain Penn State men about the Quakers permitted to play against them, although they had what they regarded as evidence that they were not eligible.

On top of this came the game on Saturday, which was a carnival of boding contact rather than a clean football test. At some stages the game degenerated into a brawl and the officials did nothing to stop it. Pennsylvania blames the Pennsylvania blames the year Penn State appeared on the field equipped with wrist and hand braves of leather. Fenn asked that the braces be removed, but Harlow refused.

All in all, the outlook for another Pennsylvanila-Penn State game is very dark. Cessation of the annual tussies, which were thangurated in 1850, would mean a big loss, both financially and in prestige, for Penn State.
